

ABSTRACT

A method for controlling the molecular weight and other properties of a polymer by permeating it with a small molecule while the polymer is in the solid state and optionally subjecting the polymer plus permeant blend to a melt processing operation. The polymer is preferably in a molecularly disentangled state.